Sir Harold Alexander

EARLY NEXT SPRING the people of Canada will welcome a new Governor-General, in the person of Field Marshal Sir Harold Alexander, distinguished soldier and strategist of two world wars. His appointment has been received with enthusiasm and satisfaction in all parts of the Dominion both by members of the armed forces, who served under him overseas, and by all others who are familiar with his distinguished record in the service of the Empire. Sir Harold will be the seventeenth Governor-General since Confederation and he is the second great British soldier to hold that office. The first one was Baron Byng of Vimy, who commanded the Canadian Corps for a time during the First World War, and was later Governor-General of Canada from 1921 to 1925.

Sir Harold, who is fifty-three years of age, is the son of the Earl of Calibon, of County Tyrone, Ireland, and he is Britain's youngest Field Marshal. He came to Canada at the peak of a brilliant military career, during which he took part in many of the decisive actions of the war. The first of these was the evacuation of Dunkerque, which although it was a defeat, is also recognized as a great military and moral achievement. In that action, Field Marshal Alexander was the last man to leave the shores of France. Lord Gort's report describes this incident in the following words, "on being satisfied that no troops were left on shore they (Alexander and a senior naval officer) left for England." He took part also in the retreat in Burma where he succeeded General Sir Claude Auchinleck as commander. Here he again proved great in defeat, and was successful in bringing four-fifths of his divisions to safety over difficult jungle trails.

Last To Leave At Dunkerque

Later, as commander-in-chief in the Mediterranean theatre of war, he planned the successful series of attacks in Africa which led to the complete surrender of the enemy forces in Tunisia. Much of the credit for the success of "D" Day operations and the subsequent victories in Europe were attributed to the tremendous "holding action" carried out in Italy under Field Marshal Alexander's command. Many Canadians served with him in this campaign and many were also under his command in England when, during the critical days of the Battle of Britain, he was in charge of the Southern Command and was also one of the organizers of the "battle training schools". The people of Canada will be honoured to have their Governor-General a man who has played such an important part in shaping the Allied victory, and they will extend a warm and sincere welcome to Sir Harold and Lady Alexander and their family when they come to this country.

Lord Hartington

Marquis Leaves Estate To Son He Never Had

The Marquis of Hartington, late son-in-law of former U.S. Ambassador Joseph Kennedy, left a will bequeathing the bulk of his estate to a son he never had, it was revealed.

The young Lord Hartington was killed in action while serving in Europe with the Coldstream Guards, fewer than four months after his marriage to Kathleen Kennedy.

His will, which he wrote on May 5, 1944, the day before his wedding, left the bulk of his estate to "my first or only son".

There were no children born of the marriage.

He bequeathed $20,000 to his wife, and the rest of the estate, totalling more than $150,000, reverts to the one-year-old son of his brother, Lord Andrew Buxton.

Lord Hartington was heir to the Duke of Devonshire, the largest landowner in England.

MINARD'S LINIMENT

SMILE AWHILE

"Dull party, isn't it?"

"Let's go home."

"I am home. I'm the host."

"I want to know what I'm best fitted for. Should I get to a palmist or a mind reader?"

"Better choose a palmist—you know you've got a palm."

Joe: "So you had good luck on your fishing trip, eh?"

Mo: "Good luck? Why the fish bit me so fast I had to get behind a tree to bait my hook!"

Barber: "Haven't I shaved you before?"

Sergeant: "None. I got this scar at Pearl Harbor."

"Hello, Ruth, do you still love me?"

"Ruth? My name is Helen."

"I'm so sorry—I keep thinking this is Wednesday."

"I'm sorry," said the dentist, "but you cannot have an appointment with me this afternoon. I have eighteen cavities to fill." And he picked up his golf bag and went out.

Mistress: "And I want even the kitchen floor clean enough to have our meals on."

New Maid: "You will look funny."

Friend: "So you fined Miss Sweetly $5 for speeding. Is she appealing?"

Magistrate: "Oh, very. But he couldn't let that affect our decision you know!"

A three-year-old girl was sitting beside the road crying. A man came by and asked what was the matter. The girl answered, "My mother has killed the cat."

"Well," said the man, "I will buy you another cat."

"No, thank you," she said, "I just wanted to kill it, myself."

Then there was the traveller who asked a native of a remote region in Jackson County if he didn't have trouble getting the necessities of life in that inaccessible spot.

"Yes, we sure do," replied the mountaineer, "and half the time we do get it, it ain't fit to eat."

Returning United States Service Men Take Over Bungalow Camp

Men and women of the American Army, attached to the Alaskan division, who have seen service in the far north, the Aleutians and other outposts far from civilization are finding rest and recreation on special leaves in the Rocky Mountains in Jasper National Park.

Each week approximately 50 G.I.s and W.A.C.s journey to Jasper by Canadian National Railways from their nearest base at Edmonton and spend five days in Canada's largest national park, indulging in sports of all kinds, including horseback riding, swimming, cycling, boating, fishing, tennis, archery, volleyball and golf, all of which are free of charge. There are also bus and pack trips and dances at which the girls' Booster Club, of Jasper, are hostesses.

During the time at camp the men and women are completely on their own "with no brass and any silver that is worn is in the hair or carried in the teeth," according to a bulletin issued by the U.S. Army.

To provide for the men and women, the U.S. Army has taken over the Becker Bungalow Camp. More than 200 persons have attended the camp since it opened on July 15, including a party of newspaper correspondents attached to the army, and the camp will be filled to capacity each week until it closes on Oct. 15.

Many of the service personnel returning to the United States from postings in isolated northern areas, some from within the Arctic Circle, are spending a week of relaxation at the camp before proceeding to their homes or to other assignments.

Novel Proposal

Australian Paper Suggests Military Might Of Empire Be Transferred To Canada

The Sydney Morning Telegraph of Australia has proposed a drastic change in the structure of the British Empire, involving a shift of the centre of economic, political and military strength from the United Kingdom to the Dominions and India.

Vigorously following up External Affairs Minister H. V. Evatt's demand for a major voice for Australia in the Pacific settlement, the Daily Telegraph said "historic changes are at work around the Pacific basin which an Empire centralized in London anachronistic and a diplomacy centralized in Europe as dangerous as an atom bomb at a Zanzibar picnic."

The newspaper declared that changes must be effected that will make it no longer necessary "to fight a life-and-death struggle on the White Cliffs of Dover, conscious that defeat would leave a major portion of the Empire to be gobbled up in disorganized fragments."

The proper transformation, the Daily Telegraph said, might call for the transference of the Empire's military air power to Canada together with the bulk of the United Kingdom's general manufacturing industries.

Says Civil Aviation Prices Must Be Brought Within Reach Of

Lord Winstanley, minister of civil aviation in the new British Labor government, said in an interview in Montreal that civil aviation in the future must be brought within the reach of larger sections of the population which cannot now afford the benefits of high speed at high prices.

"We have got to find some way of cheapening the cost of flying," he said, "and that is one of our aims. It is no good having India 16 hours away from Britain by air if it is too expensive for most people to fly there."

Viscount Knollys, chairman of the board of directors of British Overseas Airways which accompanied Lord Winstanley, said he agreed.

Worked All Right

Germans Used Hydrogen Peroxide For Propelling Their V-Bombs

U.S. Navy Secretary Forrestal has disclosed that hydrogen peroxide, the common bleach and antiseptic, was used by the Germans as a propellant for their V-bombs.

At the time of their surrender, the secretary said in a statement, the Nazis were obtaining "surprisingly good results" in harnessing power from disintegrating hydrogen peroxide and were adapting it to naval uses.

Success in life depends upon persistent effort, upon the improvement of moments more than upon any other one thing.—Mary Baker Eddy.

It is the old lesson—a worthy purpose, patient energy for its accomplishment, a resoluteness undaunted by difficulties, and then success.—Fulton.

Failure is often that early morning hour of darkness which precedes the dawning of the day of success.—Leigh Mitchell Hodges.

Everybody finds out, sooner or later, that all success worth having is founded on Christian rules of conduct.—Henry Martyn Field.

Cpl. Evelyn McVein, Sceptre, Sask., enlisted in the Canadian Women's Army Corps at Calgary in December, '42. Immediately after she had received her basic training at Vermilion, Alta., she was sent to St. Anne de Bellevue, Que., for a N.C.O. course. Returning to Calgary, Cpl. McVein was put in charge of the Medical Inspection Room at Skinner Barracks. In Sept., '44, she attended a three months' radiographers' course in Toronto, Ont., at the completion of which she did radiographic work in the Colonel Belcher Military Hospital, Calgary. Posted to Regina in May, '45, Cpl. McVein is at present working in the X-ray department of No. 12 District General Hospital, Regina, where "Take a deep breath, hold it, please," is a familiar term echoing along the corridors near the X-ray rooms. "I have one brother overseas," stated Cpl. McVein.

CWAC WEARS WOUND STRIPE—

Wounded in the service of her country, Cpl. Constance Barker of Ottawa, Ont., is one of the few CWACs entitled to sew the little gold stripe on her sleeve. She was serving with the Canadian Section of the Second Echelon in Antwerp, Belgium, when the city was severely bombed. Cpl. Barker was badly cut by flying glass. At present she is stationed with 1st Echelon, 21 Army Group, Germany.

CWAC FOOTBALL TEAMS—

Marking the conclusion of a successful football season in England, selected all-star teams of Canadian Women's Army Corps personnel left recently to play exhibition games with the C.W.A.C. team at First and Second Echelons in Germany. They planned to spend three days on the continent. Officers in charge of the U.K. team is Lieut. Helen Huntley, Rocky Mountain House, Alta. The all-star team was made up from players in the London area and from CWAC units serving in the field throughout England. Western members of the team include Pte. O. A. Second, Cardale, Man.; Sgt. M. C. Fletcher, of Govan, Sask.; Cpl. R. Allen of Unity, Sask.; Cpl. L. M. Willis, of Stanley, Alta.; Pte. O. Meredith, Battleford, Sask.; Cpl. M. Campbell, Hainsworth, Man.; and Cpl. V. Sokolowski, Pine Falls, Man.

CAPS OFF? CAPS ON?

It seemed all very simple at first. We were told to wear our caps when the boys wore theirs, but of course we knew that there would be one exception—church; here only, would we sit demurely like other women with our heads covered. But, alas and alack! A member of the Corps happened to attend a session of parliament. Something told her that women attending parliament were to keep their heads covered, so she left it on, with the idea still nibbling at her mind. "Only in church, only in church," to her great joy and relief, she found that she had done the correct thing. The speaker has ruled that only women with their heads covered are properly dressed when in the House. So now we know. In church and in the House of Parliament our caps will remain on our heads. All other times—caps off, please!

CWAC IN ARMY OF OCCUPATION

A draft of nearly four hundred CWACs arrived in England lately. They are the first CWACs sent from Canada to be posted with the Army of Occupation. Before leaving Kitchener, Ont., they were reviewed by Col. Margaret Eaton. She told them that they might live their lives in occupied Europe anywhere from two to five years. The girls have been sent to relieve long service veterans who are to be repatriated as quickly as possible; and will handle jobs never undertaken by members of the Canadian Women's Army Corps before. All but 32 reverted to the rank of private in order to get across, but what's a few stripes when the longed-for day had at last arrived and they were really on their way. Kit bags and haversacks were well loaded down with extra supplies of soap, cosmetics and other articles rationed overseas. Just think, a little over four years ago there was no Women's Army, and now it's a Corps. Over twenty thousand have answered to the call. "Carry on, girls and good luck wherever you are."

SHELL SAY IT EVERYTIME—

"Pte. Buttercup: I just can't stand the thoughts of it!"

Penelope CWAC: What's this you can't stand the thoughts of?"

Pte. Buttercup: I've just realized that I'm beginning to look more like my identification card every day.

OUR COMPLETE SHORT STORY—

Queen Of Hearts

By EDITH LOVELL

McClure Newspaper Syndicate

The third time Reed danced with Jean Carlyle, Janet Day felt tears sting her eyelids. She slipped into the powder room, longing to throw herself down and sob. Reed, falling for another woman, grinning fatuously when Jean Carlyle said, "Oh, big boy, how you can dance!" Reed, dancing with Jean again and again, while Janet was handed around among such stale romances as Fats Ransom and Beethlorev Carew.

The nerve of Jean Carlyle, anyway! She had two husbands, and was at least five years older than Janet. Oh, how could he be so stupid! Flattery. "Reed, what an attractive fellow!" "Reed, how can you think of such witty things?" There ought to be a law against extra women wedding in on a crowd of young married people.

Well, it wouldn't do any good to stare glassy-eyed into the mirror. Janet powdered her nose carefully, fluffed the curls over her ears and went out again.

Fats was waiting for her. Janet could see Reed and Jean at the punch bowl. "Let's have some punch," she said to Fats. They lined up beside Reed and Jean.

"This is good," Janet murmured. "First I've had." Let Reed know he'd been neglecting her.

"Oh, I'm sorry," said Reed. His faced flushed a bit, but he didn't look sorry. "And, Reed, we'd better be going," said Janet.

"Oh, but the evening's young," protested Reed.

"And we're all having such a glorious time!" said Janet.

"Janet stayed a little," "I have such a headache, dear," she said, with a patient smile.

Janet thought she'd managed well until they got home. "Boy, that Jean's a dizzy kid," Reed grinned. "Sure got lots of pep."

"She's not a day under thirty-five," snapped Janet. "And she dyes her hair!"

"Well, I think she's plucky, trying to find new interests again. She's had some pretty tough breaks," defended Reed.

"Tough breaks, my eye," said Janet. "Anybody who's sap enough to fall for that line—"

"Who's falling?" "I wonder!"

Janet closed herself to sleep, muffling the sobs in her pillow. Reed ate breakfast in cold silence and left without kissing her. Or Jackie.

Janet kept busy all morning. After a lonely lunch, Jackie held out a chubby arm to Janet. She took him and sobbed into his hair: "Jackie, we're going to see Grandma. She's the best flier-upper I know."

By the time they had reached the fat two-year-old up the hill Janet was out of breath. When Grandma opened her door Janet started crying again.

Grandma took Jackie while Janet dried her eyes. "Well?" said Grandma.

"I'm so scared," Janet confessed. "I don't know what to do."

"And Reed had a quarrel?" "Yes."

"Thinking of going back to Midvale to your folks?" "Yes—or no—oh, I'm all mixed up."

There's that Jean Carlyle. Reed's fallen for her like a ton of bricks. What shall I do?" Janet wailed.

"Well, Janet honey, you've got a lot to learn," said Grandma. "The longer you like to say and do are almost always wrong. If you do just the opposite of your impulses, you'll probably be doing right. And just because Reed thinks some other woman is attractive is no reason to rush off and leave him."

"I don't want him if he likes somebody else better," sobbed Janet.

"He doesn't like Janet better than you. Only she makes him feel comfortable—a big shot."

"She flatters him," said Janet. "And you can't help pointing out his little faults."

"I suppose that's so," admitted Janet.

"So he gravitates to her just like a potato sprout to nightlight. Make a man feel like a king and he'll treat you like a queen," said Grandma.

"Why, I guess you're right!" said Janet in wonder. She went to the mirror to pull on her hat. "I'm younger and prettier than Jean. And Reed and I have had so much fun together. And we've always got Jackie!" Janet added up her assets.

"Grandma," she demanded, "how did you know exactly what had happened when I came in?"

"Oh," chuckled Grandma. "I made the same mistake."

Janet left, carrying Jackie. Grandma shuffled in from the back porch where Grandma had shoed him when she saw Janet coming. "Fine lot of advice you give her," growled Grandma. "I heard every word. Flattery! Treat 'im like a king! Any man could see that through!"

"Well, of course it wouldn't do to try that on you," said Grandma. "You're smarter than most men."

Grandma patted her arm. "Let's go to a movie," he said.

Potsdam is particularly noted for its associations with the long-reigning Hohenzollern dynasty, many of whose members are buried in the city.

♦ Town topics across the land: When lightning put out lights during United church service in Pennant, Sask., they carried on by flashlight.

Bad tragedy, J. Verault, 39, father of ten children, drowned in St. Maurice, Que. river. . . . The mayor at Davidson, Sask., rang the town bell at midnight when the V-J day fete came.

Reed Turner, a branch of the Canadian Cannery, Rev. Macdonald, Presbyterian, Rev. Andy Boa, United and Rev. Wright, Anglican. . . . Care-taker Charlie Bourke of the Navy League Sea Cadet camp on Manitog Island, Ont., killed a copperhead $30,000 for a broadcasting station.

♦ Dave Hasket of Peace River, Alta., at 70, operates a livery barn, looks after town scales, hauls the mail and manages the Palace Transfer office, and finds time to help the other fellow a lot. . . . At Manitow Beach, Sask., pitcher Bill Turner wound up to throw at the batter in a game, and his arm broke above the elbow with a snap. . . . Four years ago Wm. ♦ Stranger than fiction: Archie Belmont and Josie LeTuan, two trappers and guides, were drowned in the headwaters of Wapiti River last June. The bodies were never found.

The Grand Prairie, Alta., Herald-Tribune says it tells the story of an Indian woman, whose husband drowned in a similar accident, having a dream of her husband coming to her and telling her where the two trappers' bodies were. After two days' travel down river, she led a party to the exact spot to locate the bodies on the river bank.

♦ Small industries are important, too. At Cowichan Bay, B.C.: "Mr. Nichol's canning factory is a garage with the front and windows carefully screened. A couple of old stoves heat the three pressure cookers. The fish is first cleaned and then cut into pieces the approximate size of the can. Mr. Nichol's shapes and fits the salmon into its cans, salt is added, cans are capped, then put into the pressure cookers and finally cooled."

♦ An idea from the Estevan, Sask., Mercury, in part: "There are hidden jobs which do not look prominently in the picture. Many will actually require ferreting out and many will have to be redeveloped. It is the filling of these that is going to take time and they will only be filled as the surplus ebbs its way out from the cities and industrial areas when employment reaches its peaktime level there. Moral: Don't get impatient."

♦ With the object of claiming for widows and families of World War I servicemen the privileges being offered widows of World War II, Mrs. Martha Davis, of Powell River, B.C., is leading a movement to band together widows of the last war to bring pressure to bear upon government rehabilitation authorities.

♦ Paving the way for the opening of civilian traffic over the Alaska highway, big oil concerns are preparing to maintain service stations on this route, according to reports received from the north.

♦ Just a sucker. One doesn't go fishing to catch fish. To come right down to it, the fish are really incidental to the real business of enjoyment, relaxation, getting out in the sun and breathing some fresh air for a change. If the fish wants to hook himself, that is his business. Newmarket (Ont.) Era.

Will Outdo Fiction

Veterans Of This War Can Tell Many Stories Of Adventure

Writers of adventure stories and motion-picture plots will have a hard time inventing anything as strange as some of the truth about this war. Take the case of a British naval officer, four sailors, an army sergeant and three Norwegians who set out in a fishing boat in 1942 to blow up the German battleship Tirpitz in Trondheim fjord. They carried two torpedo "chariots," each of which was to be directed by a two-man crew who would jump off and swim ashore, if possible, just before the impact.

What happened, as belatedly revealed, was this: They passed three German control points, at each of which they were carefully searched and given clearance. Their engine broke down and they went into a small Norwegian port, under the very noses of the Germans, and had it fixed. As night fell they were chugging up the fjord at three knots an hour, winding their way around ships, boms and obstacles. A sudden storm threw the little craft round until both "chariots," which were carried under the keel, broke loose. The nine men got ashore, wet to the skin in zero weather; slept in the snow in a spot which morning showed to be in the middle of a group of German anti-aircraft batteries; got away, travelled by night, hid by day, finally made a daylight dash for the Swedish frontier and were halted by a two-man German patrol. They killed the Germans with the loss of one man of their own dead. The other eight reached safety.

This is one adventure—how many others in this vast conflict? Not all the stories will ever be told in print. All, whenever even one man has survived, will be told in front of firesides, in public houses and wherever veterans get together. They will match anything that has ever happened to the human race anywhere. And they come out of what used to be called this soft, modern civilization of ours—New York Times.

To Build Cars

U.S. Will Produce 500,000 Automobiles Before End Of Year

Barring labor disputes that would slow down its supply lines the United States automobile industry will get back into full-scale civilian production much more quickly than had been generally expected.

On the basis of present indications it will:

1. Produce 500,000 vehicles before the end of the present year.

2. Attain a production rate of 6,000 units annually within the next 12 months.

3. Provide employment for more men and women than at any time in its peacetime history.

This optimistic outlook came from automotive industry sources following the government's removal of all restrictions on production. High-level employment will come several weeks ahead of volume output from its assembly lines, the industry executives asserted, explaining that the manufacture of parts and assemblies must get under way well in advance of final assembly.

British Do Not Beg

People Getting Along On Less Food Than During War

Back in September of last year it was estimated that U.N.R.R.A. would have to care for 100,000,000 Europeans this coming winter. That was before Russia made its request for help.

The 47,000,000 people of the United Kingdom are not included, of course, which is a source of bewilderment to many a Canadian who feels that the people of Britain ought, after six years of privation, to have some reward for serving as the bulwark of freedom.

The British, in fact, are taking less today than they did on the average while the European war was raging. The little islands can not ship foodstuffs to Europe since they must import much of their own food; therefore they take less from overseas sources so that more may be sent to the shattered continent. There is an object lesson here in self-sacrifice—Vancouver Sun.

The Newest Fabric

Cloth, Soft, Warm, Light, Woven From Poultry Feathers

In the not too distant future, when a sales clerk tells you that the suit you're eyeing is as light as a feather, it won't be a mere figure of speech. Scientists have developed a new fabric made principally from chicken feathers which looks like wool, but is warmer, softer and lighter than wool.

War shortages, which gave impetus to many make-do and mend methods, inspired the experiment with feathers begun by B. H. Foster, manager of the textile section of a rubber company. Concerned at the loss of 100 million pounds of chicken feathers and 30 million pounds of turkey feathers going to waste every year, he figured there must be better use for them than stuffing pillows.

After separating the quills—using a machine especially designed for this purpose—the fine elements, called barbs, are mixed with other fibres and spun into yarn. The yarn is woven into cloth just as in any other textile.

Particularly adaptable for admixture with other staple textiles, such as rayon, cotton, wool and nylon, feather yarn can be dyed any color and has brilliant lustre. Odorless, it launders with no more shrinkage than cotton. And the cost of the fabric can be kept low enough to permit it to be made into budget-priced items.

Feather-plucking, it's predicted, will become a new industry, a source of income to farmers. For every 38 broilers a farmer plucks it will mean the makings of a man's suit. The fabric, now in its last laboratory stage, is not quite ready for yard goods counters.

Free Drugs

For Old-Age and Blind Pensioners in Saskatchewan

Drugs which may be applied to old-age and blind pensioners and their dependents and to beneficiaries of monthly allowances as the expense of the Saskatchewan government, have been listed in a formulary which was distributed early in September.

Dr. C. F. W. Hames, deputy minister of public health, said that the formulary would provide for a wide range of pharmaceuticals. Special authorization would be needed from the department's medical services division for the supply of any drug or appliance not listed in the formulary. An exception is made, however, in the case of drugs and preparations routinely or emergently used in obstetrics and surgery.

Copies of the formulary will be sent to all druggists, doctors and hospitals in the province. The druggists will also be supplied with a new form which will simplify the procedure on claiming payment for drugs supplied. Hitherto druggists have been required to submit counter sales slips in triplicate and a copy of the doctor's prescription in each case. From now on the druggists will enter sales on the new form, giving the code number and pharmaceutical description as set out in the formulary, and furnish also the prescription number.

Assigned For Duty

English Woman Is Chaplain To Service Girls In Germany

Recently there was a story about Canadian girls being appointed as assistant chaplains in the army. Well, in England there's a girl—Miss Allison Harvey, a former church of Scotland missionary in India—who has just been appointed for overseas service. Miss Harvey is the first woman army chaplain to be assigned for duty in Germany. She will work among several thousand auxiliary territorial service girls of the British 21st Army group.

Miss Harvey says that there'll be a lot for her to do among the girls stationed with the occupational army in the defeated Reich, and she says these girls probably will prefer coming to a woman to discuss their difficulties.
